2. Reason for the revision

Nexon recognizes that the return of profits to shareholders is an important management issue. We have sincerely taken to heart the feedback received through ongoing dialogue with shareholders and investors calling for improvement in capital efficiency and have carefully considered specific measures for it.

We maintain an extremely stable and highly profitable business based on a strong game portfolio centered on our flagship franchises, which gives us ample financial flexibility to enhance shareholder returns while securing the investment capital necessary for future business growth and sufficient liquidity on hand.

Given our strong financial foundation, we have determined that, with a view to further improving capital efficiency, the best course of action is to return a portion of our accumulated surplus funds directly to our shareholders. This dividend of surplus represents a one-time measure to reduce our accumulated surplus funds and will not impair our ability to invest in future growth.

Going forward, our shareholder returns will be based on stable and consistent dividend payments and flexible share buybacks; however, should excess funds accumulate again in the future, we will consider additional shareholder returns after comprehensively evaluating the business environment at that time. We will strive to expand shareholder returns while maintaining financial soundness and striking an optimal balance with investments aimed at business growth.
